NATIONAL SCIDE

In setting afire the great cities of Bremen, Hanover and Hamburg—and dozens of smaller towns—the Germans not only make public confession that their cause is lost, but reveal again that mania for destruction which has scorched nearly every part of Europe where they have sent their troops and which, indirectly at least, is responsible for their present plight.

To the normal person, blessed with a rational mind, there is no way to explain this sort of thing.
What good does it do to lay waste cities that were centuries in the building, which contain priceless relics of the past, and whose ruin will delay for years the rehabilitation of the country? Only a fanatical Nazi can even profess to supply the answer to this question, and it will not be an answer which will satisfy the great masses of people who have seen their homes leveled and must now wander helplessly around the countryside.

If there is any plan at all behind so clear a policy of national suicide, it probably stems from a realization on the part of the Nazi leaders that the Reich as such never again can mean anything to them or that they will be permitted to live within it.
What happens to it is, therefore, of no personal consequence, and the less there is left the smaller will be the Allies' reward for seizing it and the greater their task of rebuilding it for their own purposes.

Ever since this war began in 1939, utter chaos has followed in the footsteps of the German legions. The wreckage of countless cities in enslaved states testifies to this fact. Today the same fate is coming to the homeland—eloquent evidence of Hitler's rule or ruin philosophy.

GENERAL CLAY'S JOB

To members of the Clay clan who attained distinction in American public life, another may be added by historians of the future. Maj. Gen. Lucius D.
Clay will manage civilian affairs in conquered Germany as subordinate to General Eisenhower.

Lucius Clay is not a Virginian, as was Henry Clay, nor a Kentuckian, as was Cassius Clay.
General Clay comes from Georgia. He was born in that state in 1897, was graduated from West Point in 1918 and for the next twenty years was engaged in engineering duties, as instructor in the Army, and in rivers and harbors work. His posts have been in the Panama Canal Zone, in the Philippines and in the United States. More recently he has been assigned to Headquarters of the Service Supply.

Possessor of a vigorous personality, General Clay's job in Germany will give full test to all his talents. A commission in Berlin composed of American, British, Russian and probable French generals will issue instructions and it will be up to Lucius Clay to put them into effect. The role may be one that will receive more than passing mention in history.

THE NEW PRESIDENT

standards and ideals he may wish to adopt; and second, that he comes to office from the legislative branch of government, which is after all the backbone and heart of what we call American Democracy.

The freedom of action which he may feel proper to use in pushing ahead with the war, peace and other programs is a most important factor. If he has the needed skill and determination, it will enable him to bring new clarity and force into a score of troubled matters, untrammelled by the heavy hand of past commitments and concessions.

But it is not an unmixed blessing. He speaks with a new and fresh voice for America in the arena of world affairs only because he comes there as a stranger. He lacks what advantage there is from previous contacts with the subject matter and the personages involved.

If he is in position to re-inventory and restate America's share in foreign affairs, he is also in a position where it may be fatally easy to allow the glib familiarity of his subordinates to sway and fix his own judgments.

So far as Congress is concerned, under the Constitution the residual authority of our government always has been in the hands of the legislative branch.

Growing resistance between Congress and the Executive has been an important development in recent years—especially in the last few months.

If President Truman can bring himself, as he already has indicated, to lean heavily upon his former Senate associates for support, advice and help during the present emergency, he will have done much to cement national unity and to strengthen his own authority during the critical period ahead.

The new President's greatest handicap is that faced by several other Vice-Presidents who rose to the White House by reason of the death of an incumbent.

He is President, not by the deliberate intention and will of the American people, but by a series of twists of Fate—the last of which was the unexpected death of President Roosevelt.

For this reason, President Truman faces the odd difficulty that, at the moment when he most needs the faith and confidence of the American people, he must start almost from scratch to earn it and create it.

There have been factors and happenings in the new President's background which may prove a grave handicap in getting full public support—there is no particular reason for not facing the fact that his selection for candidate for Vice-Presidency was not a popular step, even in his own party.

But fair play has always been an American trait, and there is no reason to believe that, if President Truman faces his new tasks with firmness and candor, he will be denied an honest chance to work for those objectives which he believes should be the proper national goals.

He is The President — President of all Americans; Commander-in-Chief of the armed services in time of war; chief spokesman of the nation in the attempt to set up a lasting peace; major figure in the working out of a thousand war and post-war problems.

Not the will of any man, including himself, but rather the workings of those hidden and imponderable forces we call Destiny, elevated him to this position of supreme opportunity and responsibility.

The very least to which he is entitled is a fair chance to do the best he can.

American Forces Poised For Final Thrust Into Heart of Dying Germany

At the same time, an unconfirmed Paris report said Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson's armor had spearheaded to within 15 to 17 miles of Berlin's outskirts. This report was not confirmed by headquarters or front dispatches.

The great German city of Leipzig, meanwhile, was threatened by U. S. First Army forces which smashed more than 25 miles through crumbling opposition to within seven miles of the city.

Leipzig also was menaced by the Third Army, which swept eastward only 10 miles to the south. The city is 34 miles from the Czechoslovak border. Two Third Army columns surged across the Mulde river in a push into disorganized German positions threatened by a Russian push from the east.

At the northern end of the western front the British, driving toward the lower Elbe, pushed past embattled Bremen on a broad front. Their advance threatened to seal off Germans holding Denmark and North Sea ports.

Front dispatches said the American First and Third armies joined southwest of Halle. The new junction was effected after German defenses on the road to Leipzig were thrust aside.

of the work being done by the club to rid the roadsides of billboards and of the work being done by the junior associates of the club.

Following the business session of the club, the members were addressed by William F. Greenwalt, county agent, on the subject of "Soil Conservation," and by Mrs. George Watson on "Earthworms."

Mr. Greenwalt began his talk by stating that there are eight or ten conservation subjects. In Bucks county the main source of income is from dairy products, poultry and poultry products and vegetables, and the farmers' work of this type differs considerably from that in the wheat and cotton belts, he said.

The speaker discussed the tendency of the farmer with the use of tractors and mechanical equipment to make fields larger and to plow greater areas. He called attention to the erosion caused by the water cutting its way through the land in following a natural, straight course and the way in which the erosion could be saved by the use of contour and skip plowing and planting.

One hundred and fifteen farms in the county have been laid out to date in strip farming and the program is progressing satisfactorily as the farmers learn the value of it.

Mrs. George Watson gave a talk on the earthworm, referring to it as an underground plow, making the ground porous for plant roots.

As the worm digs, said Mrs. Watson, it swallows the dirt and its castings are a perfect fertilizer. Dead leaves are its principal food and experiments have shown that it will also eat raw meat.

Mrs. Watson strongly urged her audience not to destroy the earthworm found in their gardens as it is a valuable asset to the proper maintenance of the garden soil.

Mrs. Watson also urged her audience not to destroy the earthworm found in their gardens as it is a valuable asset to the proper maintenance of the garden soil.

The Bristol Theatre is closed until 6 p. m. today.

In some churches tomorrow throughout the area pastors will preach special sermons.

A Bensalem memorial service in honor of the late president of the United States, Franklin D. Roosevelt, is to be conducted at the hour of four tomorrow afternoon in the auditorium of Bensalem Township high school. The Bensalem Rotary Club and Cornwells Parent-Teacher Association will sponsor the program, which will be as follows:

Musical meditation; orchestral prelude, "Onward Christian Soldiers," introductory statement; invocation; hymn, "How Firm a Foundation," scripture reading; brass quartet, "Abide With Me," vocal solo, "Ave Maria," Miss Rheyman Leary; silent meditation and prayer; vocal solo, "O Master Let Me Walk With Thee," Penn Salmon; hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers," benediction. Clergymen of Bensalem will participate.

Carl R. Freehafer, vice-president general manager, eastern area, Bell Telephone Co. of Penna., has made the following statement: "There will be a momentary pause in telephone operations throughout the land at the starting time of President Roosevelt's funeral Saturday afternoon to pay silent tribute to his memory."

All plants of the Philco Corporation will be closed today in memory of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, according to John Ballantyne, Philco president.

All employees scheduled to work today will receive full compensation and any loss of production resulting therefrom will be made up by overtime work next week, Ballantyne said.

Philco's Pennsylvania plants are located at Philadelphia and Crofton.

En route to the final resting place of the nation's 32nd president, the train will arrive at 30th Street station, Philadelphia, from Washington about 1:30 a. m., Sunday, and will remain there a few minutes before proceeding to Hyde Park.
